RESIDENTS
as TEACHERS and LEADERS

April 28–30, 2017
CHICAGO, IL - ACS HEADQUARTERS

EFFECTIVE TEACHING
SUCCESSFUL LEADING
PRACTICAL APPLICATION TO LIFE AFTER RESIDENCY
Residents are expected to master a broad expanse of clinical and basic science knowledge and operative skills. Residency programs are tailored to meet these needs. Residents are also expected to master a number of critical nonclinical skills, including leading teams and teaching. However, few residency programs offer opportunities for residents to become proficient in these areas. The Division of Education of the American College of Surgeons has developed a course to address this need.

The goal of this course is to help surgery residents develop some of the essential nonclinical skills critical to their success as senior-level residents and practicing surgeons. The course specifically addresses the skills necessary to become more effective teachers and leaders. The number of participants is limited to allow interaction with faculty and facilitate networking with other attendees. This course is targeted for mid- to senior-level residents, but all are welcome to attend.

COURSE CONTENT

The course will address the following essential skills for residents’ lifelong roles as teachers, leaders, and practicing surgeons:

EFFECTIVE TEACHING

- Establishing a positive learning climate
- Finding time to teach
- Teaching in ambulatory settings and the operating room
- Giving feedback on performance

“Great balance of information and group discussion.”

SUCCESSFUL LEADING

- Developing and leading productive teams
- Resolving conflict
- Using different leadership styles effectively
- Maximizing various working styles

PRACTICAL APPLICATION TO LIFE AFTER RESIDENCY

“Terrific course. Would definitely recommend to other residents.”

“All of the presenters were interactive and engaging.”
