

Ryan Merkow, MD, MS, FACS | University of Chicago

Dr. Merkow is a board-certified surgical oncologist and health services researcher at the University of Chicago. He completed his surgical residency at the University of Chicago and fellowship training at Memorial Sloan Kettering Cancer Center. His clinical practice focuses on upper gastrointestinal malignancies and regional cancer therapies. He received formal health services research training at the American College of Surgeons as a Clinical Scholar in Residence and completed a master's in health services and Outcomes Research in the Center for Healthcare Studies at Northwestern University. He is currently Associate Director of the Implementation and Health Services Center at the University of Chicago, with a focus on implementation science, surgical outcomes, quality improvement and patient safety.